

Arkency Ruby Jobs Board

Offer

- Your ad will be displayed for 30 days on our all blog-post at <http://blog.arkency.com/>
 - The ad will be displayed inline the blog-post content
 - Usually after a few lines of introduction to the post
 - At the top of it
- This offer has been sent to all interested parties
- There is going to be displayed only 1 ad at given time
- Total cost: $400
 - paid upfront
- Are you interested or do you have any questions?
 - support@arkency.com

Example Ad

- The maximum length of the job listing is 200 characters
- The provided text should be in English
- exact colors, font sizes, margins and text may differ

Some time ago I was working on a problem and I could not find a satisfactory solution. But it all turned out to be much simpler when I reminded myself about a tool that I rarely use: recursive function.

Full Stack developer at Rebased \(Warsaw, Poland / Remote\) We are looking for developers with extensive knowledge of Rails and React.js. Join our awesome team shipping fantastic products.

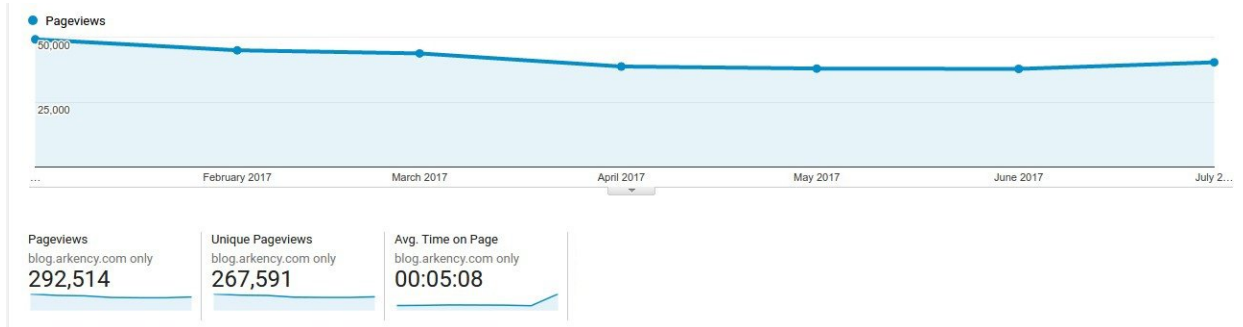

Powered by Arkency Ads

You see... The iterators from Ruby's Enumerable and queries from ActiveRecord are so nice that you barely need anything different than each to solve a problem. And here I was trying to use each in 5 different ways, in various different approaches failing again and again.

Traffic at blog.arkency.com

Page views

per month: ~ 40 000 - 50 000

Readers' Location

	A	B
1	Europe	39%
2	Americas	35%
3	Asia	21%
4	Oceania	2%
5	Africa	1%